General Concept

The general concept of this course of fire is to develop operational marksmanship, tactical rifle handling drills and techniques and minor tactics. These matches and procedures are designed to be an intermediate step before becoming “operationally ready”.

The matches are being applied to a conventional rifle range and will be shot in relays so more competitors will have more opportunity to shoot. Therefore, additional safety requirements are included.

All matches will start from a “Low Ready” position. The Range Officer will give a “Load” for each match. The scenario will assume you have been alerted to a potential threat and are now ready to engage. An official “Unload” and the clearing of each rifle will take place at the end of each match.

Equipment

The only tactical rifle acceptable is one which would be logically and practically used on such operations.

A tactical type sling may be used.

Any sight may be used which would be logical and practical to use on such operations.

Tactical Rifle Training Matches

OSA (Operational Shooting Association) Canada Updated 2013-06-26

The tactical rifle may be compensated providing the compensator/brake would be logical and practical for operations.

Although the tactical rifle may be tuned, adjusted or accurized, all of its functioning must be safe, logical and practical for operations. For example, if a trigger has been adjusted to be so light as to be considered not practical for operations, it would not be allowed.

No more than 5 rounds may be loaded in any magazine. A minimum of 5 magazines are required.

The same rifle must be used throughout the competition.

Magazine holders/pouches need to be of a tactical type and positioned tightly against the body. They should be capable of securing the magazines in place during strenuous physical activity, such as running and/or moving to various shooting positions.

Ammunition

Ammunition must be of a caliber considered logical and practical for use on operations. It must be full power.

A summary of the required ammunition count is as follows:

- Match 1 – NSCC FIBUA - 60 rds
- Match 2 – Nuclear Challenge - 65 rds
- Match 3 – Black Bear Tactical Rifle Challenge - 115 rds
- Match 4 – Bisley Urban Contact Match - 40 rds

Definitions

Alert – There are two alert positions:

- High Alert – This position is taken when a dangerous threat is imminent but not immediate, it's the stage before actually aligning the sights and firing. The rifle is held about 10° below the line of sight and the operator is looking forward for the threat. The trigger finger may be located on the trigger.
- Low Alert – This position is taken when the threat is likely and there is a reason to be prepared. It is the stage immediately before High Alert. The rifle is held at about 45° below the line of sight and the trigger finger must be along the trigger guard.
- Start Position – The Low Alert will be considered the start position for each exposure in each match.

Once the load has been given and prior to the first exposure, the operator must be in the "Start" position and return to this position for the start of each exposure IAW match requirements.

Excess Hits

Excess hits in any scoring area (as a result of the shooter cross-firing on his own target) are dealt with by removing (patching out) a hit of the highest value for each excess hit until there are the correct number of hits. The target is then scored in a normal manner.

If it is determined that the extra shots are from someone else cross-firing, the extra shots will be removed by first patching out a shot of the lowest value, then one of the highest and continuing this “low, high” procedure until the required number of shots remain. The target is then scored in the usual manner.

Safety

At any time the rifle is loaded, the trigger finger must be off the trigger and located along the trigger guard, except when in the “High Alert” position or when actually firing.
